"Yes, siree, that road will be built, and work will be commenced this season," was the reply of one of the projectors of the new electric motor line scheme, to a question pro dounded by THE BEE, "You see all that is delaying us is the Union Pacific company, for as soon as they give us permisssion to cross their bridge, the work will be commenced. Yes, indeed, assuredly I think they will let us cross. They want to make money just as much as anybody, and that would put a good many thousand dollars in their pockets. If they refuse, it is not im-possible to build another bridge. Avenue G is open to us to the river, and that is just is open to us to the river, and that is just about where the next bridge across the Missouri at this souri at this point will be built. But we won't have to wait for that, for the right of way across the Union Pacific will be se-cured. All our stockholders, with two or three exceptions, have signed the acceptance of the ordinance passed by the council and the scheme is still being pushed. A Contractor's Fall. Chris Bosen, the contractor who is building the new Eiseman block, met with a serious accident vesterday. He was superintending the unloading of a large boiler that was to be placed in the cellar. In walking from the ground floor to the sidewalk, he stepped on the end of a plank, which tipped under his weight, and precipitated him backward to the cellar. He struck upon the back of his head on a sharp cornor of masonry, cutting a fearful gash five inches long, and laying bare the skull for nearly the whole distance. He was rendered unconscious, and did not regain his senses until after he was removed to the office of Dr. Cleaver, where the wound was dressed and the cut sewed up. He was then taken to his home, No. 632
Mynster, where he was resting last evening as easily as could be expected. The accident came near being a fatal one, and Mr. Bosen may well congratulate himself on his fortunate escape. As it is, the wound is an ugly and painful one, and will occupy his full attention for several days.

They Want One Day in Seven.

The barbers of the city held a meeting last wening at the shop of John Schicketanz, No. 104 South Main street. About thirty were present, to take some action regarding the proposed Sunday closing scheme. It was stated that twenty-one of the twenty-four proprietors had signed the petition to close. the only ones refusing being Frank Levin, Fritz Bernhardi and John Bohn. All the barbers present expressed themselves as strongly in favor of the move, and many who were not there had signed the petition. John Schicketanz was elected chairman and Reuben Hermer secretary. A committee consisting of John Schicketanz, chairman, George Smith and C. E. Ruddick, was chosen to prevent a petition to the city coun-cil, asking that body to pass an ordinance re-quiring the barber shops to close on Sunday. Another meeting is to be held next Monday evening. In speaking of the matter after the meeting adjourned, several of the barbers expressed themselves to THE BEE freely, and their plan of action was thus outlined by one of them:
"Our committee will see every member of the city council, either to-morrow or Mon-day, and we will know at our meeting Mon-day evening what the chances are for the passage of the ordinance we desire. The chances at present do not seem to be particularly bright. Pat Lacy, the president of the council, says he is opposed to Sunday closing, and always has been. So we don't have much hope in that quarter, although he may change his mind when he thinks over the other side. If the council refuses to do as we wish, we will simply enforce the state law and the results may be rather unpleasant. You see, this Sunday law covers several branches of business, the barbers being only one of them, and it is quite probable that, if the matter is stirred up, the temperance peo-ple will take hold of it, and insist on closing everything. Of course, they can easily do it but we don't look to this end, as we only insist that the barbers shall have a rest on the Sabbath. If the council grants our petition, the state law will not be touched by us, and it is hardly probable that any one else will bring it up.

"Our shops were closed here years ago, but the closing ordinance was repealed for the benefit of John Bohn, who claimed that the transient trade at the Ogden demanded it. We want to close, and it will have to come. All the barbers have registered in favor of it, and we have the state law behind us. If they try to jump over us, they will find a job before them. We mean business, and a week from next Sunday will see the change commenced."

To Aid the Johnstown Sufferers. Council Bluffs will have another chance to-morrow night to add to the reputation she has already gained for liberality to charitable objects. The newly organized Senovton club will give a concert at Dohany's opera house for the benefit of those who have suffered so much in the recent disaster at Johnstown, Pa. Some of the best musi-cians of this city and Omaha will appear on the programme in vocal and instrumental se-lections, and a few of the most popular airs from the "Smugglers of Senovton" will be repeated. The recent success of the company in light opera insures a splendid musi-cal treat, while the fact that the entire re-ceipts of the concert will be put into the Johnstown fund should pack the nonse. Admission to any part of the house, 50 cents; no extra charge for reserved seats. Tickets go on sale this morning at Camp & Ellis drug store.

Kate Field's Wise and Witty Address on the Liquor Question.

Miss Kate Field tectured in Tremont Temple, last evening, on "The Intemperance of Prohibition," says the Boston Transcript. The hall was well filled. Among those present were Mrs. Mary T. Lathrop of Michigan, who will reply to Miss Field in Tremont Temple this evening. Mrs. Mary H. Hunt see this evening; Mrs. Mary H. Hunt, su-perintendent of scientific temperance instruction for the Women's Christian Temperance union, who is also expected to speak at the same meeting, and Mrs. J. Ellen Foster, an Iowa temperance speaker. Miss Field said she had chosen her subject with reluctance, but had been persuaded to do so by her experience in prohibition Iowa. She was told that the place in which she was staying was a prohibition town, but that liquor could be obtained by any one. She applied at a drug store to test the truth of the statement, I asked, she said, for a half pint of California brandy for medical purposes, and wa given a bottle labeled French brandy for which I paid 75 cents. I took a spoonful of it and felt as though I had swallowed a torch light procession, [Laughter.] I had it analyzed and found that it contained fusel oil, but nothing from the grape. A man selling such stuff for medicine ought to be prosecuted for man-slaughter. [Applause.] Miss Field gave a number of experiences of a simitar character, which had convinced her that prohibition was a failure. Con-tinuing, she said: "I now appeal to the fourth estate, the press, and hope it will use its influence in favor of temperwill use its influence in rayor of temper-ance--not prohibition, which is the worst form of intemperance. [Voice, "No. no,"accompanied by loud and con-tinued applanse from all parts of the house.] Society is composed of men, women and cranks. The latter may be of either sex. I don't care to speak of them. I wish to address men who don't mistake, their livers for conscience mistake their livers for conscience.

[Applause.] The speaker denounced the prohibition sought to be secured as the most intemperate possible. She reviewed prohibition, from the origin of the human family down to the present time, and showed that people sought other witnesses were examined briefly for what they were forbidden to use. The Puritans prohibited nearly exerything except liquors and wines. There was no drunkenness then. Their descend-ents behind closed doors drink poisonous compounds, and drankenness abounds. In 1886 Neal Dow said the Maine law had not been enforced in the twenty years it had been on the statute books. The speaker declared that prohibition in Vermont and Rhode Island was a total failure. In Iowa in 1885 the president of the Pharmaceutical association declared that nine-tenths of the families used liquor. Leaders in relig-on and lessened the bank deposits. Dyspeptics make more alcohol than the distilleries, said Miss Field. Shall they therefore be abolished? If so, who will be left? What is yeast? It is largely composed of alcohol. Shall we then prohibit bread? Total abstainers are frequently fond of pies and sweetmeats which are nearly indigestible and form alcohol. Consequently many of them are walking distilleries, paying no license and giving the country no revenue. I do not wonder they are against high license. The speaker alluded to the physiolo-ious thought there declared, that the prohibitory law has decreased immigra-gies which had been placed in many of the schools in which many lies were taught concerning the effect of liquors. She said the prohibitionists had no more right to teach their doctrines in the school through these textbooks than catholics or protestants. The falsehoods, she said, would prove to be boomerangs. Alluding to the statement made that 60,000 people annually in the United states die from the use of alcohol, which was a great exaggeration, she said that 50,000 people die of consumption in the same period of time. and asserted that this disease is cause by over-eating. Dr. Dio Lewis says' she continued, that where one person dies of alcohol twenty persons die of gluttony. Shall we, then, all stop eating because the few eat intelligently and the many make pigs of themselves? If it is a crime to sell liquor, it is a crime to drink it. Prohibition has done worse than nothing for temperance; high license has done much for good By high license the dives can be most easily closed up, the number of saloons is reduced, and the town is beautified by the larger revenue derived. Miss Field read a letter from the attorney general of Minnesota, declaring that high license had worked beneficently in that state, and that the republican party there had planted itself squarely on that basis.

Miss Field condemned the adulteration of liquor and the "idiotic Ameri-can habit of treating." She advocated as the best means of bringing about temperance the encouragement of wine drinking at the table. The most drunkenness is found, she declared, where wine and brandy are not produced. She said she had lived for three years in Italy, but in that time had not seen a drunken Italian. She had seen more drunkenness in Scotland than in any other country. Prohibitionists would have us believe, she continued, that drunkenness is on the increase, but it is not true.
